American Society for Cell Biology
ASCB 2024 Annual Meeting
Saturday, December 14th – Wednesday, December 18th, 2024
Anticipated Attendance: 6,500

Group Description

The American Society for Cell Biology (ASCB) is a professional organization dedicated to advancing the understanding of cell biology. Founded in 1960, ASCB provides platforms for scientific exchange, collaboration, and education through conferences, publications, and educational programs. Society advocates for the importance of cell biology research and supports career development and diversity initiatives within the scientific community.

Attendee Profile

The American Society for Cell Biology (ASCB) Annual Meeting attracts a diverse group of attendees, including researchers and scientists in the fields of cell biology and molecular biology who present their research and findings. Graduate students, postdoctoral fellows, and undergraduate researchers also participate, seeking to learn and network. Industry professionals from biotechnology and pharmaceutical companies attend to connect with academic researchers and explore potential collaborations. Additionally, educators, including professors, come to stay updated on the latest research and teaching strategies in cell biology.
