American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons 2025 Annual Meeting

Anticipated Attendance: 17,000

Group Description

The American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons (AAOS) is a professional medical association established in 1933 to advance the field of orthopaedics. It represents orthopaedic surgeons, residents, and allied health professionals in the United States. AAOS provides members with educational resources, training programs, and professional development opportunities to enhance clinical skills and knowledge. The organization publishes guidelines and research to promote evidence-based practices and improve patient care. Additionally, AAOS advocates for policies that enhance patient access to orthopaedic care and engages in public outreach to promote musculoskeletal health and injury prevention. Overall, AAOS aims to advance orthopaedic knowledge, improve patient outcomes, and promote musculoskeletal health and wellness. Members of the Academy, called fellows, are orthopaedists concerned with the diagnosis, care, and treatment of musculoskeletal disorders. The orthopaedist's scope of practice includes disorders of the body's bones, joints, ligaments, muscles, and tendons. Fellows have completed four years of medical school and at least five years of an approved residency in orthopaedics. In addition, they must pass an oral and written examination, be certified by the American Board of Orthopaedic Surgery, and submit to stringent membership review processes prior to admittance.
