Recycled Materials Association
ReMA 2025

Monday, May 12th – Thursday, May 15th, 2025

Anticipated Attendance: 6,000

Group Description

Recycled Materials Association (ReMA) is a prominent trade association in the United States representing the recycling industry. It advocates for policies supporting recycling, provides resources for members, and promotes the economic and environmental benefits of recycling. ReMA influences legislation and regulations, offers educational programs, conducts industry research, and facilitates networking opportunities for its members. Overall, ReMA works to advance recycling and promote sustainable practices in material recovery and reuse. Formerly known as ISRI, Institute of Scrap Recycling Industries, Inc.

Attendee Profile

The Recycled Materials Association Annual Convention is a diverse group of attendees, including professionals from the recycling and waste management industries, sustainability advocates, policymakers, and business leaders. Representatives from recycling facilities, scrap metal and paper companies, environmental organizations, and manufacturers incorporating recycled materials into their products would likely be present. Government agencies focused on environmental regulations, technology providers offering innovative recycling solutions, and researchers studying sustainable practices might also attend. Additionally, investors, consultants, and supply chain managers interested in the economic and environmental impact of recycled materials would find value in networking and exploring new industry trends at the event.
