The Minerals, Metals & Materials Society

TMS 2026 Annual Convention

Sunday, March 15th – Thursday, March 19th, 2026

Anticipated Attendance: 4,100

Group Description

The Minerals, Metals & Materials Society (TMS) is an international professional society that serves scientists, engineers, and researchers working in the minerals, metals, and materials fields. TMS supports the advancement of materials science and engineering through technical programming, professional development, publications, and networking, with a strong emphasis on innovation, sustainability, and interdisciplinary collaboration. The society brings together academia, industry, and government professionals to share research, develop technical standards, and address global challenges related to materials processing, manufacturing, and performance.

Attendee Profile

The TMS attendees include materials scientists and engineers, metallurgists, and researchers from academia, industry, and government laboratories, as well as professors, graduate students, and postdoctoral researchers presenting and learning about the latest scientific advancements. The meeting also attracts engineers and technical leaders from aerospace, automotive, energy, electronics, defense, and manufacturing sectors, along with mining and minerals professionals focused on extraction and processing. In addition, R&D managers, sustainability and innovation leaders, equipment and technology suppliers, and exhibitors attend to explore new technologies, collaborate on research, and discuss emerging trends shaping the future of materials science and engineering.
